Main activities

Helping university departments plan and create resource communities and collections

Managing the implementation and quality control for the standardized recommended metadata fields used to describe the resources

Defining repository user rights and resource access levels (open, restricted, embargoed, closed access)

Example of creating new collection – resident theses

Where they would fit in? – In RSU Students` final theses community. –
Coordinate with Academic Affairs Department

Who will administer this collection? - Faculty of Residency representative

How can we add them to repository? – No e-service. – Manually

How many of them there is going to be? – 10-20 per year. – System librarian

What metadata is needed? – The same as for other final thesis. – System librarian sends information about required fields - Faculty of Residency representative sends in metadata and full text files.

Adding resources

Manually

Importing from the administration module

Metadata and full text flow from internal and external information systems

Study material repository (SMR)

DSpace 7.3

The screenshot displays the homepage of the Rīga Stradiņš University Study Material Repository (SMR). The header is a dark red bar with navigation links: "Communities & Collections", "Browse", and "Add". On the right side of the header are links for "EN" and "Log In". The main banner features a background image of bookshelves filled with books. Overlaid on this banner is the title "Repository of study materials of Rīga Stradiņš University". Below the title is a search bar with the placeholder text "Enter text to search" and a red "Search" button. Underneath the search bar is a red button labeled "Browse all materials". Below the banner, a white section displays four statistics: "295 Materials", "86 Authors", "45 Collections", and "17 Org Units". At the bottom, there are two white panels. The left panel, titled "Browse the Collection", contains a button for "Communities & Collections", the word "OR", and a "Browse" button with a dropdown arrow. The right panel, titled "Add a Material", features a large square button with a red plus sign inside.
